Fernandes Marinho, Dr Susana	Consultant	Non-financial professional interest	Member of the Immunology and Allergy Clinical reference Group - NHS England Member of prior committees (pre-changes in committee membership) The Clinical Reference Group for immunology and allergy has a significant work plan this year and all members of the committee have been given important roles to move forward a range of areas of commissioning essential for the delivery of allergy and immunology services across England. The move to commissioning by local ICS teams for specialist allergy services makes the input of allergy specialists absolutely critical in the development of national policies, guidelines and service specifications that will be implemented locally. I have experience working both nationally (as a previous CRG member) and locally in the development of the Allergy service in Manchester, this experience is important to support the CRG in the development of allergy provision across England. I have been leading on the review of Allergy specialist service specifications and have also started discussions with the CRG Lead commissioner, the chair and another member with a finance colleague from NHS England regarding development of national tariffs for Allergy and Clinical Immunology.	01/11/2022

Singh, Mr. Rajinder Pal	Consultant	Financial interests	During the Covid times, I had innovated the Singh Thattha Technique, which allowed faith-observant bearded minorities to wear tight fitting respirator masks without the need for shaving. This technique was published in peer reviewed scientific journal and has since spread world-wide as it is applicable not only to healthcare, but also to various other industry sectors exposed to harmful particulate matter. https://pmc.ncbi.nlm.nih.gov/articles/PMC7532752/ https://www.beds.ac.uk/news/2020/november/university-academic-helps-trial-pioneering-ppe-beard-technique-for-healthcare-staff/ There are huge expectations from faith-observant bearded minority communities (especially Sikhs, Muslims, Jews), who are hoping for the bespoke mask to be made, and for HSE approval so that they can meet job requirements which require use of tight-fitting respirator masks. Some of them overseas had their lost jobs restored using my innovation- https://www.toronto.ca/news/update-on-the-city-of-torontos-response-to-the-world-sikh-organization-of-canadas-complaint-against-contracted-security-guard-companies/ Our group of researchers, led by me, with support from community leaders of with faith-observant minorities (Muslims, Jewish, Sikhs), healthcare professionals, and MPs had engaged with NHS England, Health and Safety Executive (HSE), UK Parliament and the ex-PM for its acceptance. However, the HSE suggested that manufacturer guidelines necessitated that a fit test would be valid only if the mask wearer was clean-shaven, and they did not accept the beard cover technique although we had published our evidence. The suggestion from HSE was for us to liaise with a mask manufacturer to explore options of making bespoke masks, and with new guidelines which did not necessitate shaving for fit test, and evidence, which they could potentially evaluate. Over the last few years, I have tried approaching several mask manufacturers in UK and overseas, including 3M, local manufacturers and others, but was unable to draw their interest. At the same time, there was an ongoing expectation from the minority communities for a potential solution to the inadvertent shave requirement to validate a Fit Test for respirator masks, or to wear a PAPR alternative, which precluded them from several jobs. I have received communications from UK border police, Scotland Yard, Fire & Safety, Health-care professional in medicine and dentistry over the few years seeking my help. Given that no mask manufacturers were interested in UK or Europe, I teamed a lawyer from London by profession, and we formed the Singh Thattha Company, primarily with the intention to make these bespoke Singh Thattha masks. Given that our UK options did not materialise, we then decided to explore by collaborating with Indian companies. There was 1 promising potential in Ahmedabad, and we contemplated obtaining 200 masks for our research, and the masks would have been made with my input as the nuances are well known to me, being the innovator. We were also going to design FRFM masks for respected Muslim ladies wearing Hijab, as there was a suggestion once from NHS England personnel that the UK Army was wanting to discuss those options with me (but there was no follow up on that). The costs would have been borne by our company personally. The masks would have been used for further research and submission of evidence to HSE, and any potential commercial interest would arise only if we were successful.	25/04/2025
