Information for Patients

The Optometric Led Glaucoma Clinic (OLGA) at Altrincham Hospital

What is the OLGA clinic?

OLGA clinic stands for Optometric Led Glaucoma Assessment clinic. In this clinic, an optometrist with special training in glaucoma sees all the patients. The patients attending this clinic have 'ocular hypertension' (high pressure in their eyes) or glaucoma.

Your consultant has asked for you to be seen in the OLGA clinic because you have either 'ocular hypertension' or glaucoma and your eye condition is stable. Our specially trained optometrist can now closely monitor you.

What is the benefit of the OLGA clinic?

The OLGA clinic aims to improve the outpatient experience by allowing all the necessary tests to be performed at one visit by a dedicated team of specially trained professionals. The OLGA clinic aims to reduce your waiting time in the outpatients department and to reduce the risk of your clinic appointment being cancelled.

What will happen when I attend the OLGA clinic?

The optometrist will check with you which drops you are using and whether you have had any problems since your last visit. The optometrist will examine your eyes and check the pressure in your eyes in the usual way. You will have a field of vision test and photographs taken of the nerve at the back of your eye at the same visit. You should take all your drops as usual when you come to the OLGA clinic.

Will I have any other drops in my eyes when I come to the OLGA clinic?

Yes. You will have anaesthetic drops put in before you have your eye pressure checked. You will also have eye drops put in to dilate your pupils so that the inside of your eyes can be examined and a photograph can be taken of the nerve at the back of your eye.

These drops will blur your vision for approximately three hours and make your eyes more sensitive to bright lights. For this reason, we advise you not to drive to and from your OLGA clinic appointment.

What should I bring to the OLGA clinic?

Please bring your spectacles and a list of all your medications and any remedies or other over the counter products that you take.

What happens if I have a problem when I attend the OLGA clinic?

You will remain under the care of your consultant even though you are being monitored in the OLGA clinic. If you have a problem with your eye condition at your appointment, the optometrist might be able to help. If necessary, the optometrist will arrange for you to be seen by one of the doctors at Manchester Royal Eye Hospital, and could arrange for you to be seen in the consultants' clinic again.
